

Patient First

Situation Patient First is a healthcare company that provides urgent and primary care in medical centers throughout the Mid-Atlantic. As it expanded into new markets in past years, Patient First faced several challenges. It had to educate communities and build awareness of the benefits of urgent care where the concept was unfamiliar. It needed to define and differentiate its brand in areas where it faced competition from other urgent health care providers. And finally, it needed an integrated marketing communications program that could serve as a branding platform for materials used in current and prospective markets.

Solution After the Channel team was hired, we conducted extensive primary research to identify key messages that needed to be conveyed to specific markets. By establishing that Patient First offered top-notch care that was equal to more traditional, less convenient options, we were able help our client increase awareness, interest and trust in its services.

Since then, Patient First has turned to us to develop multi-channel campaigns to promote the opening of each new center. We've supported Patient First's central message of quality care with communications that detail the convenience and accessibility of its on-site services in television and radio spots, print, direct mail, outdoor advertising, a new website, e-newsletters and collateral materials.

Result Today, Patient First operates 49 centers throughout Virginia, Maryland, the greater Washington, DC area along with Central and Eastern Pennsylvania.

My doctor is at Patient First.

Everywhere you look, you'll find people who entrust their health to Patient First. They feel better knowing they can walk in without an appointment and get the treatment they need — from check ups to lab tests, even x-rays and prescription drugs. When you're on the go, that's a real plus! They take comfort in building a relationship with experienced physicians who will take the time to know them and follow their care. That's why I'm glad my doctor is at Patient First. For physician schedules and additional information, visit patientfirst.com.

“Olivia's Recital”

- Mom: It's always tough when your child gets sick, but the worst was when my daughter, Olivia, came down with a fever three days before her big ballet recital.
- Olivia: I was dancing the role of Cinderella.
- Mom: Unfortunately, Olivia's pediatrician wouldn't be in until Monday.
- Olivia: But the doctors at Patient First were in.
- Mom: The doctors at the new Patient First in [location] are in every day from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. We walked in, saw a doctor and had a lab test that confirmed Olivia had strep. We even got an antibiotic right there.
- Olivia: And I got a standing ovation.
- Mom: Thanks to the impressive performance of the staff at Patient First.
- Anncr: Another happy ending brought to you by Patient First neighborhood medical centers—now open at [street address] in [location]. With primary and urgent care services, it's the care you need when you need it. And most major insurance is accepted. Learn more at Patient First dot com. That's Patient First dot com.

“The Big Bike Race”

- Wife: When you're injured, the last thing you want to do is run all over town for treatment. Last month, my husband, Jack, fell off his bike while training for a triathlon.
- Jack: My hand was cut pretty bad. I also thought it might have been broken.
- Wife: So we went to the new Patient First in [location]. It's open 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day. You don't need an appointment.
- Jack: The doctor cleaned my wound, stitched it up and had it x-rayed to check for fractures.
- Wife: Jack even got a tetanus shot and pain medicine right there.
- Jack: Now, the only time I run around town is when I'm training.
- Anncr: Another happy ending brought to you by Patient First neighborhood medical centers—now open at [street address] in [location].
